- My interest in IT began, as far as I can remember, in 2007, when Steve Jobs and his team introduced their first smartphone: the Apple iPhone, which had the ability to surf the internet just like a desktop computer, but in a pocket size. However, they had no idea that this innovation had sparked the explosion of digital technology era in which literally everything could be done without moving an inch from our own desktop chair by using internet-connected devices such as laptop and smartphone.

- Team profile: From my test results, I am an outgoing person who embraces great concepts and acts that express my feeling of excitement and kindness towards one another. As a result of my high flexibility, I am able to work effectively on collaborative assignments. Because my teammates are polite and always exudes positive energy, we don't feel much pressure in bonding with others and completing our work.

- Ideal jobs: When it comes to our ideal employment, it appears that we all desired a position with a high-paying wage, an energetic and modern working environment. Hung, Son, and I are all interested in working as developers in various areas such as mobile, NET, and front-end. Meanwhile, Minh Duc has found a job that suited his drawing talent and his passion in IT which is becoming a UI/UX designer. Because the employment requirements are so high, we set a goal of graduating from RMIT with a decent degree in order to make our fantasy come true.
